

TWO INJURED IN RUNAWAY
ACCIDENT AND ONE DIES

Woman Taken to Mercy Hospital, Only to Succumb to Hurts.

PHYSICIANS' LEG BROKEN

One Runaway Horse Passes Dr. Eagleson's on Road, and Frightens It.

Mrs. Mary Fields, a well known French woman of Daisytown, is dead as the result of a runaway accident in which she and Dr. R. M. Eagleson, one of the most prominent physicians of California, were hurt yesterday afternoon. The woman died while being taken to the Mercy Hospital in Pittsburg, from internal injuries. She was married and had a family.

Dr. Eagleson was driving to Daisytown to see one of his patients about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon and had with him Mrs. Fields, who had asked him to let her ride home. The doctor was also one of Dr. Eagleson's patients and he readily consented. As they were driving down the Grandville Coal Centre, a runaway horse came in from the rear, and the doctor and the woman in the runaway were frightened. Dr. Eagleson was driven off the road and the horse struck a side of a building. Mrs. Fields was thrown out of the porch.

Dr. Eagleson retained his place in the runaway, but a short distance farther he became entangled in the lines, and was thrown out and dragged for a distance. His legs got caught in the spokes of the wheel and a bone in his lower left leg was broken. When Mrs. Fields was picked up it was found that she was cut seriously about the abdomen, from striking on the porch. She was taken to a nearby house and Dr. Francis called. It was not thought at first that she was badly hurt, but she was sent to the Mercy Hospital in Pittsburg on the 4 o'clock train, dying shortly after reaching the place.

NARROW ESCAPE

Tries to Board Fast Moving Passenger Train at Local Station.

Mike Slotter, of anywhere, had a remarkably narrow escape from death last evening, on the railroad here, when he tried to board the southbound passenger train as it was pulling out of the station. As it was he was much injured about the head and face. Dr. Smith dressed the wounds, and this morning the man, who had been taken to the police station, was discharged.

Slotter had come to Charleroi from Uniontown and got tanked up with firewater. He wanted to go away on the 6 o'clock train, and tried to board it. His condition was such that he was not allowed on by the conductor. The man was determined, however, and when the train started out of the station and had attained a good speed, he attempted to leap on the steps, only to be thrown off, and

After playing Charleroi hard for the first four innings, the Cokers smoked up and suffered the Cherubs to hang it on them 6 to 3 in the first game yesterday.

Connellsville scored in the third and fourth. Calhoun made the first run when he secured free pass and stole two bags and crossed the pan on Tiffany's hit. Meyers registered on the second run. Things looked like Connellsville until the fifth when the Cherubs run three men over. The patsy Conway opened with a single and Smith scored on Michael's hit. The best thing the Cokers could do was to fill the sacks and die from poor stick work. The Cherubs got together again in the eighth and again in the ninth for two more, which netted a total of six runs. The Mail dies touched Michaels for 10 hits and seven free passes but to no avail. Silcox was found for nine hits but Charleroi was more fortunate in bunching the bingles in the proper places.

The second game started off very much like a Cherub victory and it took ten innings to show them different. C. Francis muffed Knicey's fly in the second allowing him two sacks. Conway hit for two bases, scoring the former and later crossed the pan on Smith's out on a fly to Myers. The Cokers were unable to connect with sufficient bingles to do any scoring until the fifth when Cannon's two sack brought Tiffany home. In the seventh the Muddies rallied. Tiffany hit and Cannon sacrificed, the former going out to second. Gilligan followed with a hit. Here Sweeney took Cannon out of the game and put Summers on second. Ike Francis was called in to do the stick work for Kid Hagan. Ike landed for a clean single, scoring Summers. With the score a tie in the seventh, neither side were able to get down to real business until the last half of the tenth when Fraley put a clincher on the game with a single that scored Calhoun.

Featheringham ordered Murphy and MacHale off the grounds for disputing a decision at home plate, and as a result the second game was protested. The score:

Among Combination—Congressman Tener is Accorded Ovation.

The Republican State convention at Harrisburg yesterday a ticket was elected which is generally considered to possess unusual strength. The convention was marked by a good feeling and harmony and the vote of the rural delegates had the determining voice in the contest, that of Justice of the Peace Court. The standard bearers were as follows:

Speaker—General Senator A. E. Stuber, Erie. Lawyer and farmer. Treasurer—Ex-Senator Jeremiah Stuber of Lancaster. Man of letters and veteran of the civil war. Congressman J. K. Tener, who sat in the Senate from Washington county.

Stuber and Stuber were unopposed. Van Schickler had opposition in Judge Charles E. Rice of the Superior Court. The votes of the country delegates and the Philadelphians nominated Van Schickler. At the request of the friends of Rice the nomination of the Philadelphian was made.

The candidates stand on a short platform. Their campaign was managed by the veteran State Senator, Col. W. R. Andrews, who was unanimously re-elected to the convention. Formal nominations will be given the candidates by a committee of 15 at a time and place to be selected later.

Judge Robert von Moschizker was born in Philadelphia on March 6, 1870. His father, a native of Poland, was a doctor of medicine, and his mother was an American. Robert received his early education in the public schools of Philadelphia and his higher education under private tutors and by burning the midnight oil. In politics he has always been a Republican and in religion an Episcopalian. Both of his parents having died, Robert at the age of 13 entered the office of the late Edward Shippen, as an office boy. He studied law with Mr. Shippen and upon his admission to the bar on June 1, 1896, became associated in practice with that lawyer. In January, 1902, he was appointed third assistant district attorney and later advanced to second assistant and then to first assistant. He was elected a judge of the court of common pleas No. 3 of Philadelphia county in November, 1903.

At E. Sisson is of Puritan ancestry. He was born in Dayton, N. Y., January 12, 1851, but has resided in Erie county since he was 8 years old. He was educated in the common schools and admitted to the bar in 1881. After two terms as prosecuting attorney he was elected State Senator in 1900, renominated in 1904 and re-elected. He has held many important chairmanships and has taken high rank among Keystone State legislators. Jeremiah A. Stober was born in Lancaster county January 20, 1842. Educated in the common schools, he started life as a clerk. At the outbreak of the civil war he enlisted in the Union Army and served with fidelity. He was elected to the Pennsylvania house in 1875, serving several terms. In 1893 he was chosen to the State Senate. He is prominent in the Masonic and Odd Fellows fraternities and is a successful cigar manufacturer. Mr. Stober has served a total of 28 years as justice of the peace.

Charleroi Woman Taken To Washington

Will be Examined For Insanity By Commission of Washington Men.

Mrs. Rosa Bartolomic, a German woman, of Charleroi, was landed in jail yesterday on a charge of surety of the peace, by Constable E. E. Cummins of Washington. The woman was accompanied by her husband who carried a large valise. The charge was preferred in order that a commission in lunacy could be appointed, the woman having shown symptoms of insanity.

The commission, which was composed of J. V. Clark, Dr. A. E. Thompson and Harry Cannon, examined the woman, through an interpreter last evening and will make their report later to the court.

REPORT OF
SHIPMENTS

Last Month Almost a Record Breaker as Regards Locking of Coal.

The total coal shipments through Lock No. 4 for the month of May shows a marked increase over the previous month. During May there was a total shipment of coal, nut coal and slack of 19,237,000 bushels, being loaded in 861 boats and barges. A total of 1,721 empties passed up and 1,747 pieces passed down, showing that the shipments are largely on the increase, as the resumption of the largest steel and iron mills in and around Pittsburg also denote an increased demand for coal through the local trade.

The above shipment of 19,237,000 bushels is within 162,000 bushels of the largest shipment made in the history of the Monongahela coal trade, only one month's shipment exceeding it, that being the month of March, 1907, when 19,405,000 bushels were passed through Lock No. 4 in 28 working days.

During the last two weeks of May there was shipped from the Pittsburg harbor 6,000,000 bushels of coal, mostly in light boats. The harbor is fast filling up and much coal is now loaded awaiting a coal boat stage.

The Pittsburg and Morgantown Packet Columbia has entered the trade for the summer season, in connection with the Independent Pittsburg and Fairmont Packet, I. C. Woodward, and both are doing good business. The summer excursion trade is now fairly on, and all the available excursion boats have dates booked ahead.

Elected Track Captain.

Harvey O. Chalfant of Speers has been elected captain of the Washington and Jefferson track team for the coming year. His was the only name brought up and he was accorded a unanimous election. Chalfant, who is a member of the class of 1910, is well known in Charleroi where he has relatives.

Are Being Run Out of Pittsburg and Coming to this Vicinity.

ARE BLAMED FOR HOLDUPS

Thought that Bad Gang is Doing Much Robbing—Guilt Cannot be Established.

Tramps are to be seen in unusual large numbers in the Monongahela valley at present, and the negro "Wearies" are seemingly in the majority. It appears that these fellows have been run out of Pittsburg and the large cities by the police departments and that they have come to this valley, where they expect to find good picking.

While there have been no depredations or crime of any kind traced to any of these fellows, the very fact that they are in the neighborhood makes many nervous, and the police are keeping a sharp lookout. Nearly all the tramps and professional bums to be seen are tough looking fellows, who apparently would not hesitate at crime to gain their desires.

There have been an unusually large number of hold-ups in the vicinity and while some of these are attributed to the hobo gang, such has not yet been established as fact. The police, whenever possible, run the tramps from the vicinity. Sometime ago it was mentioned that there were many negro and white hobos in the vicinity of California. At this time there were many robberies committed in that section. The shooting and killing of an alleged member of the tribe by Officer Lake at California has caused a noticeable decrease in the number of robberies, and this it is hoped has frightened the alleged gang from that vicinity.

By Their Fruits.
About the only tone of criticism that is heard over the platform adopted at the Republican State convention yesterday at Harrisburg is that it is in the past tense and promises nothing. There are no issues, the critics complain, and the people therefore do not know what to look for or expect from the results of a Republican administration in case the party is victorious at the polls this fall. The platform congratulates the people of the Commonwealth on the Republican success to which is attributed the return of prosperity; indorses President Taft and Governor Stuart; acknowledges the country's debt of gratitude to the soldiers and sailors of our civil war; commends the Legislature upon the enactment of many wise and useful measures; and felicitates the State upon the splendid condition of its finances.
As its critics state, the platform is entirely in the past tense, but it contains everything to which the adherents of a great political party can "point to with pride." So far as political State issues are concerned there are none in the general accepted sense of the word—questions of public policy on which there is an honest division of opinion. All the issue there is at the present time is an honest administration of the business affairs of the State. There is no division of opinion on this, and while the administrations of the past have not been perfect, an energetic effort has been made in the right direction, and this the people approve. With the inauguration of the popular vote of the uniform primary law by which the people choose their State and county delegates as well as nominate all elective officers, the lines of political bossism are cut down to very narrow limits. From this time hence political dictation will not figure to any great extent in Pennsylvania.

The nomination of Judge Robert von Moschizker of Philadelphia for Justice of the Supreme Court at the Republican State convention yesterday is another demonstration of the fact that it is the young man who is today on the stage of action, not only in business, commercial and material affairs, but in politics as well. Judge von Moschizker has but just entered upon his fortieth year, yet for the past six years he has sat upon the bench as a judge of the court of common pleas in Philadelphia. In seconding Judge von Moschizker's nomination at the convention yesterday, W. T. Shaffer of Delaware paid an eloquent tribute to the work of young men. He said in part:

"Alexander Hamilton had wrought out the great fabric of this Republic and done his life's work and was dead at 32; Grant wore the three stars of the lieutenant general when he was in the early forties; Roosevelt was nominated for Vice President of the United States and elected when he was but 42; Boies Penrose was elected Senator from this imperial Commonwealth when he was but 36. And if we shall call the big roll of the great jurists of the world it will be remembered that Buller sat in judgment with Mansfield in England's greatest court when he was but 31; John Jay was Chief Justice of the United States at 34; John Banister Gibson was in the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania at 36 and Chief Justice at 46; Black was a member of the Supreme Court at 41."

It was the work of young men that was largely responsible for the overthrow of the corrupt political machine in Washington county that for years dominated politics and extravagantly administered the county's finances. Young men started the fight and kept it up undismayed until the dynasty was overthrown. It is the young men who have the highest political ideals, and it is they who can be depended upon to vote and work for decent politics.

Electric Sparks
In these days of wholesale improvements it is rather dangerous for any town to grant a company a franchise for phone or street car service from the fact that there might be some inventions and new things added which the said town would not get.

Charleroi had an epidemic of measles last week, and as far as we know has it yet, and Monongahela comes to the front with a similar scare.

Down in staid old Monongahela they are actually beginning to show some signs of progress. They are going to have a corner stone laying at their new school building on Friday, and are going to have a parade in honor of the event.

If Charleroi wins another game today, local people will begin to actually think of having a pennant raising here next year.

Sunday School conventions are the order of the day. Notice they nearly always hold those things at a country village to give the city folks a chance to see green grass.

Big Jim Jeffries didn't throw Big Smoke Johnson out of the theatre down at Pittsburg the other night, more from the reason that Johnson was in Boston than anything else.

Why Tailors Sit Crosslegged.
A tailor making a dress coat sat crosslegged on a table, like a Turk. "Why do tailors always work in that uncomfortable position?" asked a visitor.

"Women's tailors don't. Only men's do," was the reply. "And for men's tailors it is the most comfortable and the most convenient position possible. You see, the sewing on men's clothes is very fine. The work must be held up close to the eyes. Well, in this position I lean the work on my elevated knees, and thus it is nearer my eyes, while at the same time my back remains straight. Analyzed, the position is a fine one. It keeps the back straight and the chest out, the knees make a table close up to the face, and eye strain is avoided."

"Tailors for women sit on chairs. For one thing, the sewing on women's clothes is less fine than on men's. For another, the woman's tailor has to get up every few minutes to go to the manikin, and all that rising, if he sat crosslegged on the floor, would tire him too much in the day's run."—New York Press.

Both Tainted.
"You are in the employ of that millionaire up on the hill, aren't you?" snapped the sharp faced woman who ran the butter and egg shop.
"Yes, ma'am," responded the man in the white apron, "and I want two pounds of butter for my master's table. He said he'd send to town after it, only the roads are so bad."
"He did, eh? Well, we are not particular about his trade. Did you tell him I said his money was tainted?"
"Indeed, I did."
"And what did he say?"
"Said so was your blamed old butter."—Chicago News.

AN ETIQUETTE HINT

How to Present Mutual Friends Who Are Strangers.

Strangers who go to cities where their friends have acquaintances are frequently given cards or letters of introduction. To thus present two friends is one of the most gracious acts that can be performed by a third person and is not one which should be asked save under exceptional conditions. If a person wishes to bring together others who are strangers the suggestion will be made without request from the one who is going away. However simple it may seem to ask for introductions, it is a matter on which none can be too particular. There may be some reasons, unknown to outsiders, which would make it extremely awkward to ask one friend to go to see another, and yet to refuse such a request is almost impossible.

When one woman is being presented by letter to another it is customary for the friend who knows the other two to write the third and tell her that Mrs. or Miss So-and-so will be in town at such a time and will go to see her. She may, if she likes, inclose the stranger's card with the new address on it, that the old resident may know where to go. Then when the stranger arrives in town she sends her own visiting card, with that of the friend who is making the introduction, to the other whom she wishes to know. The first visit should be paid at once by the old resident. If a man is being introduced he follows the same line, sending his visiting card with the address on it to the woman upon whom he has been invited to call. He is not expected, however, to pay his visit until she has written that she would like to have him come. This leaves the woman the option of refusing his acquaintance if she chooses, although such a situation rarely occurs. On receipt of his visiting card the woman writes that she will be happy to see him, and it is rather expected that she will set a time for his call; otherwise he might arrive when she is out. If it should happen that the man cannot go at the time appointed, he should write a note explaining that a previous engagement prevents and that he will give himself the pleasure of going shortly, trusting to find the woman at home. If a man or a girl has a business letter of introduction, it should be sent into the office with the visiting card and not taken in by the person who is being presented. The latter way makes it necessary for the stranger to wait while the letter is being read in his or her presence, while if it precedes it is read before he or she goes in.

THE BANNER GIRL

American Women, the Most Charming Creatures In the World.

American girls have won the reputation of being the most charming in the world. This is due not so much to surpassing physical beauty as to manner and expression.

The girl who has learned the art of controlling her features perfectly has gained a great advantage over other members of her sex. As she uses her features, so she may be described as beautiful or plain, interesting or commonplace, refined or otherwise. This art is almost an instinct with American girls.

A perfectly placid countenance, rarely brightened by expression, is too apt to denote insipidity. On the other hand, there are women who glory in the extremes of expression. Between the two there is a happy medium that should be cultivated.

A common error into which many girls fall is that of opening the mouth wide and raising the brows—which, by the way, causes the forehead to wrinkle in a manner that in time scores permanent furrows—in order to express pleasure.

Far more attractive is the woman who smiles with a slight parting of the lips, at the same time raising the brows ever so little.

To knit the brows in marked disapproval is extremely unbecoming, for expressions of anger and scorn do not sit well on a woman's countenance.

Gretna Green.
Gretna Green is a parish in Scotland, just "over the border," where marriages used to be performed according to the law of Scotland. The ceremony was binding performed by a layman in the simplest form, when, being registered, the parties, in the presence of witnesses, were declared man and wife. The first person who officiated at these strange unions was George Scott, who began "his unlicensed ministry" about the year 1756.

Our Neighbors.
"We simply must move," said his wife positively. "I can't stand this place any longer."

"Well, I should say not. If we move into that the neighbors would think we couldn't afford to stay where we are."—Detroit Free Press.

"Is that so?"
"Yes; she's always quarrelling with her mother, who tells me it is absolutely impossible to manage her."—Detroit Free Press.

Pyrophore.
A living light, called the pyrophore, makes illumination cheap and convenient in Brazil. The pyrophore is a monster firefly, an inch and a half long. With one it is possible to read fine print, and three will light a room. The Brazilian peasant, when he traverses by night the perilous forest paths of his country, fastens to each shoe a pyrophore. Thus illuminated, he has no difficulty in avoiding poisonous snakes, pitfalls and wild beasts. The Brazilian coquette fastens to her hair or her corsage a pyrophore incased in white tulle. The effect is as of a great luminous pearl or opal. When a pyrophore's light goes out it is not necessary to fill him up with oil, to drop a coin in him or to throw him away, but a moment's ducking in cold water suffices. Thereafter, his three little lanterns, one on the breast and two on the back, emit again as bright a radiance as ever. The pyrophore, as all nature students know, is called vulgarly cuengo, but scientifically the name is Coleopter sericeorn sternomae elatrides.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Where the Cow's Kept.
It was examination day at a council school in the outskirts of Leeds. Six rows of neat little "tykes" with polished faces and clean collars, had been carefully coached by the teacher in the difficult art of evading the pitfalls set by the wily inspector. To a boy they were ready.
The class room door opened and admitted the dreadful personage.
"Now, boys," he commenced in his most insinuating manner, "can any of you tell me a few things that are made in Leeds?"
"Clothes!" said Tommy Jones.
"Right!" said the inspector.
"Engines!" yelled Sammy Jenkins.
"Right!" said the inspector.
Then the replies came to a sudden stop.
"Now, then, you bright boys, hurry up!" said his majesty. But the dreadful silence was unbroken. "Well, now boys, what is the skin of a cow used for?" asked their examiner in order to jog their memories.
Little Johnny Binks fell off his seat in his eagerness to be seen.
"Please, sir—please, sir," he yelled, "the skin is used to keep the meat in!"—Liverpool Mercury.

The Characteristic National Meal.
It is not only in Scotland that breakfast is the characteristic national meal. Travel where you may, the first meal of the day is the one that strikes the foreign note, luncheon and dinner having gradually absorbed cosmopolitan qualities that are not even confined to hotels. But you never feel so much of an Englishman as when Switzerland gives you rolls and butter and honey and nothing more with your coffee, or when France makes this into one exquisite crumbling "croissant," with an inch or two from a yard long loaf; or when Denmark adds cream instead of milk to the coffee and a dangerous piece of pastry to the black bread and round white roll. Yet our English breakfast became an institution only in the eighteenth century. Before that only royalty breakfasted off meat bread and cheese and ale. The commoner, such as Pepys, took merely a morning draft of buttered ale.—London Chronicle.

A schoolmaster who is in the habit of selecting extracts from his morning newspaper for dictation exercise read the other day a passage in which occurred the term "dead heat."

"Jones," said he, addressing an inattentive pupil, "what do you mean by 'dead heat'?"

"Please, sir," the youngster replied, "it's the heat of the place bad people go to when they're dead."—London Schoolmaster.

A CHEERFUL OUTLOOK.

Making It Pleasant For the Studious Traveler.

An English tourist traveling on foot through one of our mountainous regions, studying the people, asked a man whom he met to direct him to a certain cabin at which he had been advised to stay overnight. "Going that?" said the man. "Well, Tom's a first rater, take him just right, but he's mighty queer."

"What do you mean?" asked the traveler.

"Well, it's like this," and the man looked at the stranger in a calm, impersonal way. "He'll be setting outside, most probably, and he'll see you coming. He'll take a good look at you, and if you don't suit him he may set the dog on you."

"If he don't and you get to talking with him and say anything he don't just like he may throw you down and tramp on you. But if you're too careful in your talk, on the other hand, he's liable to take you for a spy and use his gun fast and listen to explanations afterward."

"But it's no use trying to get by without stopping," concluded the man, with evident relish of the prospect he was opening up to the stranger. "If you was to undertake that 'twould be all up with you, for he'd think you was proud and biggity."

"If you want to come out of the mountain whole, don't go past Tom's cabin without stopping, whatever you do!"—Youth's Companion.

Deceitful Appearances.

A remarkable experience once befell Mark Twain in Australia, which, he said, determined him never again to judge by appearances. He had just landed at an Australian port, and, to his chagrin, there was no porter in sight to carry his luggage. Seeing a rough looking, badly dressed old fellow leaning idly against a post with his hands in his pockets, the author beckoned to him and said:

"See here, if you'll carry these bags up to the hotel I'll give you half a dollar."

The man scowled darkly, and, taking three or four golden sovereigns from his pocket, he deliberately thrust them into the man's hands, copied at Mark Twain's eyes and walked away with a swagger.

THE HUMAN HAND.

Its Relation to the True Education of the Young.

No animal or bird can endure the extremes of climate like man or is at home in so many different parts of the world. A dog, it is true, will follow man anywhere, but only when food and shelter are provided. Nor can any other creature subsist on such a variety of food as man can digest. He flourishes on roots, herbs, grubs, insects, fruits or fish, on which flesh eating animals would starve, or he is equally pleased with animal and bird flesh on which herbivorous animals would starve. He can pick nuts with the monkey, catch fish with the otter, dig roots with the wild pig, eat ants' eggs with the ant eater and grasshoppers with the snake.

And all this is due to man's hand. Because his hand could grasp a stone or a club man rose on his hind legs and walked and talked. His hand is the most wonderful of all tools. It twists like a monkey wrench, hangs on like a grappling hook, cracks like a nutcracker, picks like tweezers, tears like forceps, grubs like a gopher. This brings us to the first great lesson of health and common sense. Man owes all to his hand. Train the child's hand, then answer the questions that the brain, which the hand builds, will ask, and you have true education—education at its best. Give children every kind of hand work that their play instincts call for—and their play instincts are the deepest and most useful in their nature—and then brain development will follow as naturally as the night follows day.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Russian vengeance.

The Russian revolutionaries have absolutely no mercy on those who betray them. It is well known that in the year 1903 a traitor caught at Odessa was bricked up alive in a cellar.

Regnier, a French spy in the pay of the Russian police, for a long time eluded the vengeance of the revolutionaries. But they caught him at last and that just at the moment when he fancied himself safe. His body was found in his cabin on a ship which reached America. He had been suspected of being a spy and was never seen again.

CITY OF THE INSANE

Happy and Honored "Guests" of the Inhabitants of Ghast.

One of the most remarkable places in Europe, of which no tourist on pleasure bent ever takes notice, says a writer in a Berlin paper, is the "City of the Insane," by which name Ghast, near Antwerp, has been known for generations. About 1,500 men and women afflicted with insanity in all its forms live there and have a happy being as the "guests" of the inhabitants, who know by experience how to treat the unfortunate ones. In the streets, in the places of amusement, the cafes and workshops these patients may be found, and nowhere is there the remotest suggestion of restraint apparent. The board ranges from 240 to 2,400 marks a year, and, no matter how small the amount may be, the patient is always the favored member of the family. He has the first right to the most comfortable chair, and the head of the table belongs to him. He receives the most attention, and this he learns to appreciate and to endeavor to maintain by living down his illness. Even the children know how to treat the demented people. The dangerous ones are sent to another settlement and to institutions. It is wonderful how considerate, careful and kind the simple people are toward their charges, and a peep into the community would probably terrify physicians who had never heard of it. It could not appreciate the good which is being done in this "City of the Insane."

A RACE ON ICE.

The Skates That Got Away and Those That Were Recovered.

Thackeray once asked one of the men who let out skates on the Serpentine whether he had ever lost a pair through the omission to exact a deposit, and he replied that he had never done so, except on one occasion, when the circumstances made it almost pardonable.

A well dressed young fellow, was having his second skate fastened on when he suddenly broke away from the man's hands and dashed to the ice. The next instant a thickset, powerful man was clamoring for another pair.

He was a detective in pursuit of his prey, and a very animating sight it was to watch the chase. He was, as he had boasted, a first rate skater, and it became presently obvious that he was running down his man.

Then the young fellow determined to run a desperate risk of liberty. The ice, as usual, under the bridge was marked "Dangerous," and he made for it at headlong speed. The ice bent beneath his weight, but he got safely through.

The sheriff's officer followed with equal pluck, but being a heavier man, broke through and was drowned.

"His skates," said the narrator of the incident, "I got back after the inquest, but those the young gentleman had on I never saw again."—London Telegraph.

The Salt Sea Legend.

There is a legend in the Norse sagas which explains why the sea is salt. The "bountiful Frodi," whose mythical reign was a golden age indeed, possessed a quern, or hand mill, which ground out gold and peace, but which would grind out stores of anything desired by its owner. Two giant maidens, ruled over by Frodi, were the grinders. In an evil day a sea rover came upon the scene, slew Frodi and carried off the quern and the two giant maidens who worked it. When the sea rover's vessel was right out at sea he ordered the maidens to grind salt. At midnight they asked if they had not ground enough. The sea rover, angry at being awakened from his sleep, commanded them to grind until morning. Now, the giant maidens, naturally enough worked very quickly, so as they went on grinding the load of salt grew so heavy that it sank the ship, and now the sea will continue salt forever.

Looked Too Far.

There was an English farmer, a Somersetshire man, who once owned a telescope. The old man remarked to a friend at a local race meeting that the gentry nowadays had glasses for both eyes and added that he "had had one once for one eye, a right good one it was, but now it was no use at all—no, not to nobody."

"Why not?" asked the friend. "Well," he said, "it were a good one. I could see miles w' en. I could see plain the steeple of the church five miles off. But missus' son John, he borrowed en, and he tried to see the steeple of t'other church, ten miles off—and tried and tried and couldn't. And that stralined it, and it were never of no use any more—no, not to nobody."

A Troublesome Mirror.

"Mamma," said Flossie, "this old looking glass isn't any good." "Why, what's the matter with it, dear?" asked her mother. "Every time I try to look in it," explained Flossie, "my face gets in the way."

As a Corollary.

"Are marriages made in heaven?" "As to that I can't say, but I do know this much." "What's that, Peleg?" "There's lots of courting done in church."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Didn't Get a Chance.

She—What did papa say when you asked him for my hand? He—Why, he couldn't say a word. "He couldn't?" "No, your mother was there."—Kansas City Star.

EARLY CARICATURES.

Quaint Art and Humor of the Ancient Egyptians.

The fables of Aesop prove that the ancients were not without a liking for fun, and the remains of ancient art tell the same story. Examples of artistic humor are more common than is generally supposed.

A drawing on a tile in the New York museum represents a cat dressed as an Egyptian woman of fashion. She is seated languidly on a chair, sipping wine out of a small bowl and being fanned and offered delicacies by an abject looking tomcat with his tail between his legs.

The cat figures largely in the ancient comic groups of animal life. In a papyrus in the British museum a flock of geese are being driven by a cat and a herd of goats by two wolves with crooks and wallets. One of the wolves is playing a double pipe.

There is in Turin a papyrus roll that displays a whole series of such comical scenes. In the first place, a lion, a crocodile and an ape are giving a vocal and instrumental concert. Next comes an ass dressed, armed and sceptered like a pharaoh. With majestic swagger he receives the gifts presented to him by a cat of high degree, to which a bull acts as proud conductor. A lion and a gazelle are playing at draughts, a hippopotamus is perched in a tree, and a hawk has climbed the tree and is trying to dislodge him.

Another picture shows a pharaoh in the shape of a rat drawn in a carriage by prancing greyhounds. He is proceeding to storm a fort garrisoned by cats having no arms, but teeth and claws, whereas the rats have battle-axes, shields and bows and arrows.—St. Louis Republic.

An Elixir of Life.

"An annuity is the best elixir of life I know of," said the examining physician of an insurance company. "It sometimes seems as if annuitants never die. We have lots on our books who top eighty, ninety and even ninety-five years. I have passed many a sickly and decrepit old fellow as a good annuity risk—the stekler they are, you know, the better risk they make—and the next year he has turned up to collect his annuity rejuvenated, rosy, spry as a boy. The secret? The secret is that financial worry, fear of the poorhouse, ages and kills off more people than all the deadly diseases combined. Release an old man by means of an annuity from all this worry, and he throws off his years and walks erect and happy and fearlessly young."

LEPROSY.

After One Ravage the Disease May Lie Dormant For Years.

The leper in the settlement at Molokai is far better off than the leper who lies in hiding outside. Such a leper is a lonely outcast, living in constant fear of discovery and slowly and surely rotting away. The action of leprosy is not steady. It lays hold of its victim, commits a ravage and then lies dormant for an indeterminate period. It may not commit another ravage for five years or ten years or forty years, and the patient may enjoy uninterrupted good health. Rarely, however, do these first ravages cease of themselves. The skilled surgeon is required, and the skilled surgeon cannot be called in for the leper who is in hiding. For instance, the first ravage may take the form of a perforating ulcer in the sole of the foot. When the bone is reached necrosis sets in. If the leper is in hiding he cannot be operated upon, the necrosis will continue to eat its way up the bone of the leg, and in a brief and horrible time that leper will die of gangrene or some other terrible complication. On the other hand, if that same leper is in Molokai the surgeon will operate upon the foot, remove the ulcer, cleanse the bone and put a complete stop to that particular ravage of the disease. A month after the operation the leper will be out riding on horseback, running foot races, swimming in the breakers or climbing the giddy sides of the valleys for mountain apples. And, as has been stated before, the disease, lying dormant, may not again attack him for five, ten or forty years.—Jack London in Contemporary Review.

LINCOLN'S HOUSE.

An Occasion When He Did Not Recognize It at First Sight.

"Mrs. Lincoln played a good joke on her husband when he was practicing law and journeyed about from court to court on horseback," says Major Bittinger. "Those trips often took several weeks at a time."

"On one of these trips Lincoln was gone for about four weeks. He returned late one night. Stopping his horse, he dismounted at the usual place. He turned to go into the house and then stopped. Although he was a man of temperance, he thought he must have been imbibing on the way some time that day, for before him stood a building he had never seen before. He thought it over for a minute and then went across the street and knocked at a friend's door. They were in bed, and some one sang out: "Who is it?"

"Ab Lincoln," was the reply. "I've been looking for my house. Can you tell me where it is? Guess I must have been lost. I thought it was just across the way. When I went away the building was one story high, and now it is two."

SOCIAL NEWS

OF THE DAY

Prominent Couple are Married at Home of Bride's Parents.

Matthews-James.

At 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. James on Sixth Street, occurred the marriage of their daughter Miss Alma Taylor James, to Alexander Matthews of Pittsburgh, formerly of Charleroi. The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. M. Doak in the presence of immediate relatives of the two families. The bride was attended by Miss Leah Matthews, a sister of the groom, and Clarence James, a brother of the bride, was the groomsmen. The ring ceremony was used. The house was most beautifully decorated, the color scheme being pink and white. The bride was dressed in a white silk princess robe. Mrs. James Schmelbach of Charleroi played Mendelssohn's wedding march.

Following the performance of the ceremony a dinner was served. The couple left on the 8 o'clock train for Washington, D. C., New York and other Eastern points, where they will spend two weeks. Upon their return they will take up their residence at Pittsburgh, where they will be at home to their friends at 638 Boggs Avenue, after July 15.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Matthews are well known and popular here. The bride is a favorite among a large circle of friends and acquaintances. She is a member of the M. E. choir and assistant organist. Mr. Matthews is employed in the offices of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass company at Pittsburgh, where he holds a responsible position.

Anthony-Henry.

A very pretty church wedding took place last evening at 9 o'clock in the Christ Lutheran church when Morris Russell Anthony and Miss Elizabeth Henry were made husband and wife by the pastor, Rev. C. E. Fronts. Mrs. Herman A. Heupel played the Lohengrin's wedding march, the bride and groom, attended by Miss Ruth Richards and Harry B. Worthington, entered the church from the ladies' reception room and stood before the altar. The Lutheran ring service was used. A large number of relatives and friends of the young couple were present to witness the ceremonies. Mr. and Mrs. Anthony are favorably known in Charleroi, and have the best wishes of the community. They are "at home" at 922 McKean Avenue.

The Children's Choir of St. Jerome's church gave a very pleasant surprise last night to their organist, Bertha Kleist, at her home 736 Fallowfield Avenue. About twenty-five were in attendance. The evening was spent in playing games, music and singing. A delicious lunch was served, the table being beautifully decorated with the flowers the children brought with them.

By Their Fruits.

About the only tone of criticism
that is heard over the platform adopted at the Republican State convention yesterday at Harrisburg is that it is in the past tense and promises nothing. There are no issues, the critics complain, and the people therefore do not know what to look for or expect from the results of a Republican administration in case the party is victorious at the polls this fall.
The platform congratulates the people of the Commonwealth on the Republican success to which is attributed the return of prosperity; indorses President Taft and Governor Stuart; acknowledges the country's debt of gratitude to the soldiers and sailors of our civil war; commends the Legislature upon the enactment of many wise and useful measures; and felicitates the State upon the splendid condition of its finances.

As its critics state, the platform is entirely in the past tense, but it contains everything to which the adher-ents of a great political party can "point to with pride." So far as political State issues are concerned
there are none in the general accepted sense of the word—questions of public policy on which there is an honest division of opinion. All the issue
there is at the present time is an honest administration of the business affairs of the State. There is no division of opinion on this, and while the administrations of the past have not been perfect, an energetic effort has been made in the right direction, and this the people approve. With the inauguration of the popular vote of the uniform primary law by which the people choose their State and county delegates as well as nominate all elective officers, the lines of political bossism are cut down to very narrow limits. From this time hence political dictation will not figure to any great extent in Pennsylvania.

Young Men at the Front.

The nomination of Judge Robert von Moschizker of Philadelphia for Justice of the Supreme Court at the Republican State convention yesterday, is another demonstration of the fact that it is the young men who is today on the stage of action, not only in business, commercial and material affairs, but in politics as well. Judge von Moschizker, who is now in his fourth year, yet for the past six years he has sat upon the bench as a judge of the court of common pleas in Philadelphia. In seconding Judge von Moschizker's nomination at the convention yesterday, W. T.

Shaffer of Delaware paid an eloquent tribute to the work of young men. He said in part:

"Alexander Hamilton had wrought
out the great fabric of this Republic and done his life's work and was dead at 32; Grant wrote the three stars of the lieutenant general when he was in the early forties; Roosevelt was nominated for Vice President of the United States and elected when he was but 42; Boies Penrose was elected Senator from this imperial Commonwealth when he was but 36. And if we shall call the big roll of the great jurists of the world it will be remembered that Buller sat in judgement with Mansfield in England's greatest court when he was but 31; John Jay was Chief Justice of the United States at 34;
John Banister Gibson was in the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania at 36 and Chief Justice at 46; Black was a member of the Supreme Court at 41."

It was the work of young men that was largely responsible for the overthrow of the corrupt political machine
in Washington county that for years dominated politics and extravagantly administered the county's finances.
Young men started the fight and kept it up undismayed until the dynasty was overthrown. It is the young men who have the highest political ideals, and it is they who can be dependent upon to vote and work for decent politics.

Electric Sparks

In these days of wholesale improvements it is rather dangerous for any town to grant a company a franchise for phone or street car service from the fact that there might be some inventions and new things added
which the said town would not get.

Charleroi had an epidemic of measles last week, and as far as we know has it yet, and Monongahela comes to the front with a similar scare.

Down in staid old Monongahela they are actually beginning to show some signs of progress. They are going to have a corner stone laying at their new school building on Friday, and are going to have a parade in honor of the event.

If Charleroi wins another game today, local people will begin to actually think of having a pennant raising here next year.

Sunday School conventions are the order of the day. Notice they nearly always hold those things at a country village to give the city folks a chance to see green grass.

Smoke Johnson out of the theatre

Why Tailors Sit Crosslegged.

A tailor making a dress coat sat
crosslegged on a table, like a Turk.
"Why do tailors always work in that uncomfortable position?" asked a visitor.

"Women's tailors don't. Only men's do," was the reply. "And for men's tailors it is the most comfortable and the most convenient position possible.
You see, the sewing on men's clothes is very fine. The work must be held up close to the eyes. Well, in this position I lean the work on my elevated knees, and thus it is nearer my eyes, while at the same time my back remains straight. Analyzed, the position is a fine one. It keeps the back straight and the chest out, the knees make a table close up to the face, and eye strain is avoided.

"Tailors for women sit on chairs.
For one thing, the sewing on women's clothes is less fine than on men's. For another, the woman's tailor has to get up every few minutes to go to the manikin, and all that rising, if he sat
crosslegged on the floor, would tire him too much in the day's run."—New York Press.

Both Tainted.

"You are in the employ of that millionaire up on the hill, aren't you?"
snapped the sharp faced woman who ran the butter and egg shop.

"Yes, ma'am," responded the man in the white apron, "and I want two

ble. He said he'd send to town after it, only the roads are so bad."

"He did, eh? Well, we are not particular about his trade. Did you tell him I said his money was tainted?"
"Indeed, I did."
"And what did he say?"
"Said so was your blamed old butter."—Chicago News.

AN ETIQUETTE HINT.

How to Present Mutual Friends Who Are Strangers.

Strangers who have acquaintances in their friends have acquaintances in frequently given cards or letters of introduction. To thus present two friends is one of the most gracious acts that can be performed by a third person and is not one which should be asked save under exceptional conditions. If a person wishes to bring together others who are strangers the suggestion will be made without request from the one who is going away.
However simple it may seem to ask for introductions, it is a matter on which none can be too particular.
There may be some reasons, unknown
to outsiders, which would make it extremely awkward to ask one friend to go to see another, and yet to refuse such a request is almost impossible.

When one woman is being presented by letter to another it is customary for the friend who knows the other two to write the third and tell her that Mrs. or Miss So-and-so will be in town
at such a time and will go to see her.
She may, if she likes, inclose the letter of introduction.

on it, that the old resident may know where to go. Then when the stranger arrives in town she sends her own visiting card, with that of the friend who is making the introduction, to the other whom she wishes to know. The first visit should be paid at once by the old resident. If a man is being introduced he follows the same line, sending his visiting card with the address on it to the woman upon whom he has been invited to call. He is not expected, however, to pay his visit until she has written that she would like to have him come. This leaves the woman the option of refusing his acquaintance if she chooses, although such a situation rarely occurs. On receipt of his visiting card the woman writes that she will be happy to see him, and it is rather expected that she will set a time for his call; otherwise he might arrive when she is out. If it should happen that the man cannot go at the time appointed, he should write a note explaining that a previous engagement prevents and that he will give himself the pleasure of going shortly, trusting to find the woman at home. If a man or a girl has a business letter of introduction, it should be sent into the office with the visiting card and not taken in by the person who is being presented. The latter way makes it necessary for the stranger to wait while the letter is being read in his or her presence, while if it precedes it is read before he or she goes in.

THE BANNER GIRL.

American Women the Most Charming Creatures In the World.

American girls have won the reputation of being the most charming in the world. This is due not so much to surpassing physical beauty as to manner and expression.

The girl who has learned the art of controlling her features perfectly has gained a great advantage over other members of her sex. As she uses her features, so she may be described as beautiful or plain, interesting or commonplace, refined or otherwise. This art is almost an instinct with American girls.

A perfectly placid countenance, rarely originated by expression, is too apt to denote insipidity. On the other hand, there are women who glory in the extremes of expression. Between the two there is a happy medium that should be cultivated.

A common error into which many girls fall is that of opening the mouth wide and raising the brows—which, by the way, causes the forehead to wrin-le in a manner that in time scores permanent furrows—in order to express pleasure.

Far more attractive is the woman who smiles with a slight parting of the lips, at the same time raising the brows ever so little.

To knit the brows in marked disapproval is extremely unbecoming, for expressions of anger and scorn do not sit well on a woman's countenance.

Gretna Green.

Gretna Green is a parish in Scotland,
just "over the border," where marriages used to be performed according to the law of Scotland. The ceremony was binding performed by a layman in the simplest form, when, being registered, the parties, in the presence of witnesses, were declared man and wife.
The first person who officiated at these strange unions was George Scott, who began "his unlicensed ministry" about the year 1756.

Our Neighbors.

"We simply must move," said his wife positively. "I can't stand this place any longer."

"All right," replied her husband. "I know a flat we can get that is $5 cheaper than this one."

"Well, I should say not. If we move into that the neighbors would think we couldn't afford to stay where we are."—Detroit Free Press.

Qualified.

"I'm sure my daughter is going to make a great singer some day."

"Is that so?"

"Yes; she's always quarrelling with her mother, who tells me it is absolutely impossible to manage her."—Detroit Free Press.

The Pyrophore.

A living light, called the pyrophore,
makes illumination cheap and convenient in Brazil. The pyrophore is a monster firefly, an inch or two in length. With one it is possible to read fine print, and three will light a room.
The Brazilian peasant, when he travels by night the perilous forest paths of his country, fastens to each shoe a pyrophore. Thus illuminated, he has no difficulty in avoiding poisonous snakes, pitfalls and wild beasts.
The Brazilian coquette fastens in her hair or her corsage a pyrophore incased in white tulle. The effect is as of a great luminous pearl or opal.
When a pyrophore's light goes out it is not necessary to fill him up with oil, to drop a coin in him or to throw him away, but a moment's ducking in cold water suffices. Thereafter his three little lanterns, one on the breast and two on the back, emit again as bright a radiance as ever. The pyrophore, as all nature students know, is called vulgarly cuenga, but scientifically the name is Coleopterus serricornis stermose elaterides.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Where the Cow's Kept.

It was examination day at a country school in the mountains of Leedes. Several rows of neat little "rykes," with polished faces and clean collars, had been carefully coached by the teacher in the difficult art of evading the pitfalls set by the wily inspector. To a boy they were ready.

The class room door opened and admitted the dreadful personage.

"Now, boys," he commenced in his most insinuating manner, "can any of you tell me a few things that are made in Leedes?"

"Clothes," said Tommy Jones.

"Right," said the inspector.

"Engines," yelled Sammy Jenkins.

"Right," said the inspector.

Then the replies came to a sudden stop.

"Now, then, you bright boys, hurry up!" said his majesty. But the dreadful silence was unbroken. "Well, now boys, what is the skin of a cow used for?" asked their examiner in order to jog their memories.

Little Johnny Rinks fell off his seat
in his eagerness to be seen.

"Please, sir—please, sir," he yelled.

"The skin is used to keep the meat in!"
—Liverpool Mercury.

The Characteristic National Meal.

It is not only in Scotland that breakfast is the characteristic national meal.
Travel where you may, the first meal
of the day is the one that strikes the foreign note, luncheon and dinner having gradually absorbed cosmopolitan qualities that are not even confined to hotels. But you never feel so much of an Englishman as when Switzerland gives you rolls and butter and honey and nothing more with your coffee or when France makes this into one exquisite crumbling "croissant" with an inch or two from a yard long loaf, or when Denmark adds cream instead of milk to the coffee and a dangerous piece of pastry to the black bread and round white roll. Yet our English breakfast became an institution only in the eighteenth century. Before that only royalty breakfasted "off meat bread and cheese and ale. The commoner, such as Pepps, took merely a morning draft of buttered ale.—London Chronicle.

A schoolmaster who is in the habit of selecting extracts from his morning newspaper for dictation exercise read
the other day a passage in which occurred the term "dead heat."

"Jones," said he, addressing an inattentive pupil, "what do you mean
by 'dead heat'?"

"Please, sir," the youngster replied,
"it's the heat of the place bad people go to when they're dead."—London

A CHEERFUL OUTLOOK.

Making It Pleasant For the Stodious Traveler.

An English tourist traveling on foot through one of our mountainous regions, studying the people, asked a man whom he met to direct him to a certain cabin at which he had been advised to stay overnight. "Going that?" said the man. "Well, Tom's a first rate, take him just right, but he's mighty queer."

"What do you mean?" asked the traveler.

"Well, it's like this," and the man looked at the stranger in a calm, impersonal way. "He'll be setting outside, most probably, and he'll see you coming. He'll take a good look at you, and if you don't suit him he may set the dog on you."

"If he don't and you get to talking with him and say anything he don't just like he may throw you down and trounce you. But if you're too careful in your talk, on the other hand, he's liable to take you for a spy and use his gun fast and listen to explanations afterward."

"But it's no use trying to get by without stopping," concluded the man, with evident relish of the prospect he was opening up to the stranger. "If you was to undertake that 't would be all up with you, for he'd think you was proud and biggerty."

"If you want to come out of the mountain whole, don't go past Tom's cabin without stopping whatever you do!"—Youth's Companion.

Deceitful Appearances.

A remarkable experience once befell Mark Train in Australia, which, he said, determined him never again to judge by appearances. He had just landed at an Australian port, and to his chagrin there was no porter in sight to carry his luggage. Seeing a rough-looking, badly dressed old fellow leaning over a counter with his hands in his pockets, the author beckoned to him and said:

"See here, if you'll carry these bags up to the hotel I'll give you half a dollar."

The man scowled darkly, and taking three or four golden sovereigns from his pocket, he deliberately threw them into the sea, saying to Mark Train again and walked away with a good deal.

THE HUMAN HAND.

Its Relation to the True Education of the Young.

No animal or bird can endure the extremes of climate like man or is at home in so many different parts of the world. A dog, it is true, will follow man anywhere, but only when food and shelter are provided. Nor can any other creature subsist on such a variety of food as man can digest. He flourishes on roots, herbs, grubs, insects, fruits or fish, on which flesh eating animals would starve, or he is equally pleased with animal and bird flesh on which herbivorous animals would starve. He can pick nuts with the monkey, catch fish with the otter, dig roots with the wild pig, eat ants' eggs with the ant eater and grasshoppers with the snake.

And all this is due to man's hand. Because his hand could grasp a stone or a club man rose on his hind legs and walked and talked. His hand is the most wonderful of all tools. It twists like a monkey wrench, hangs on like a grappling hook, cracks like a nutcracker, picks like tweezers, tears like forceps, grubs like a gopher.

This brings us to the first great lesson of health and common sense. Man owes all to his hand. Train the child's hand, then answer the questions that the brain, which the hand builds, will ask, and you have true education—education at its best. Give children every kind of hand work that their play instincts call for—and their play instincts are the deepest and most useful in their nature—and then brain development will follow as naturally as the night follows day.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Russian Vengeance.

The Russian revolutionaries have absolutely no mercy on those who betray them. It is well known that in the year 1903 a traitor caught at Odessa was hanged on a gallows.

Regnier, a French spy in the pay of the Russian police, for a long time eluded the vengeance of the revolutionaries. But they caught him at last, and that just at the moment when he fancied himself safe. His body was found in his cabin on a ship which reached America. He had been surreptitiously taken to a secret place and there he was done over.

CITY OF THE INSANE.

Happy and Mysterious "Guests" of the Insane Asylum of Lunacy.

One of the most remarkable places in Europe, of which no tourist on pleasure bent ever takes notice, says a writer in a Berlin paper, is the "City of the Insane," by which name (Gheel, near Antwerp, has been known for generations. About 1,500 men and women afflicted with insanity in all its forms live there and have a happy being as the "guests" of the inhabitants, who know by experience how to treat the unfortunate ones. In the streets, in the places of amusement, the cafes and workshops, these patients may be found, and nowhere is there the remotest suggestion of restraint apparent. The board ranges from 240 to 2,400 marks a year, and, no matter how small the amount may be, the patient is always the favored member of the family. He has the first right to the most comfortable chair, and the head of the table belongs to him. He receives the most attention, and this he learns to appreciate and to endeavor to maintain by living down his illness. Even the children know how dangerous ones are sent to another settlement and to institutions. It is wonderful how considerate, careful and kind the simple people are toward their charges, and a peep into the community would probably terrify physicians who had never heard of such a thing. He is doing his best to do his part in this "City of the Insane."

A RACE ON ICE.

The Skates That Got Away and Those That Were Recovered.

Thackeray once asked one of the men who let out skates on the Serpentine whether he had ever lost a pair through the omission to exact a deposit, and he replied that he had never done so, except on one occasion, when the circumstances made it almost pardonable.

A well dressed young fellow was having his second skate fastened on when he suddenly broke away from the man's hands and dashed to the ice. The next instant a thicker, powerful man was clanking for another pair. He was a detective in pursuit of his prey, and a very animating sight it was to watch the chase. He was, as he had boasted, a first rate skater, and it became presently obvious that he was running down his man.

Then the young fellow determined to run a desperate risk of liberty. The ice, as usual, under the bridge was marked "Dangerous," and he made for it at headlong speed. The ice bent beneath his weight, but he got safely through.

The sheriff's officer followed with equal pluck, but, being a heavier man, broke through and was drowned.

"His shares," said the narrator of the incident, "I got back after the inquest, but those the young gentleman had on I never saw again."—London Telegraph.

The Salt Sea Legend.

There is a legend in the Norse sagas which explains why the sea is salt. The "bountiful Fredi," whose mythical reign was a golden age indeed, possessed a quern, or hand mill, which ground out gold and peace, but which would grind out stores of anything desired by its owner. Two giant maidens, ruled over by Fredi, were the grinders. In an evil day a sea rover came upon the scene, slew Fredi and carried off the quern and the two giant maidens who worked it. When the sea rover's vessel was right out at sea he ordered the maidens to grind salt. At midnight they asked if they had not ground enough. The sea rover, angry at being awakened from his sleep, commanded them to grind until morning. Now, the giant maidens, naturally enough, worked very quickly, so as they went on grinding the load of salt grew so heavy that it sank the ship, and now the sea will continue salt forever.

Looked Too Far.

There was an English farmer, a Somersetshire man, who once owned a telescope. The old man remarked to a friend at a local race meeting that the gentry nowadays had glasses for both eyes and added that he "had had one once for one eye, a right good one it was, but now it was no use at all—no, not to nobody."

"Why not?" asked the friend.

"Well," he said, "it were a good one. I could see miles w' en. I could see plain the steeple of the church five miles off. But missus' son John, he borrowed en, and he tried to see the steeple of t'other church, ten miles off—and tried and tried and couldn't. And that strained it, and it were never of no use any more—no, not to nobody."

A Troublesome Mirror.

"Mamma," said Flossie, "this old looking glass isn't any good."

"Why, what's the matter with it, dear?" asked her mother.

"Every time I try to look in it," explained Flossie, "my face gets in the way."

As a Corollary.

"Are marriages made in heaven?"

"As to that I can't say, but I do

"What's that, Peleg?"

"There's lots of courting done in church," Louisville Courier-Journal.

Didn't Get a Chance.

She—What did papa say when you asked him for my hand?

He—Why he couldn't say a word.

EARLY CARICATURES.

Quaint Art and Humor of the Ancients.

Egyptians.
The fables of Aesop prove that the ancients were not without a liking for fun, and the remains of ancient art tell the same story. Examples of artistic humor are more common than is generally supposed.

A drawing on a tile in the New York museum represents a cat dressed as an Egyptian woman of fashion. She is seated languidly on a chair, sipping wine out of a small bowl and being fanned and offered dainties by an abject looking tomcat with his tail between his legs.

The cat figures largely in the ancient comic groups of animal life. In a papyrus in the British museum a flock of geese are being driven by a cat and a herd of goats by two wolves with crooks and wattle. One of the wolves is playing a double pipe.

There is in Turin a papyrus roll that displays a whole series of such comical scenes. In the first place, a lion, a crocodile and an ape are giving a vocal and instrumental concert. Next comes an ass dressed, armed and equipped like a pharaoh. With majestic swagger he receives the gifts presented to him by a cat of high degree, to which a bull acts as proud conductor. A lion and a gazelle are playing at draughts, a hippopotamus is perched in a tree, and a hawk has climbed the tree and is trying to dislodge him.

Another picture shows a pharaoh in the shape of a cat drawn in a carriage by prancing greyhounds. He is proceeding to storm a fort garrisoned by cats having no arms, but teeth and claws, whereas the rats have battle-axes, shields and bows and arrows.—St. Louis Republic.

An Elixir of Life.

"An annuity is the best elixir of life I know of," said the examining physician of an insurance company. "It sometimes seems as if annuities never die. We have lots on our books who top eighty, ninety and even ninety-five years. I have passed many a sickly and decrepit old fellow as a good annuity risk—the sicker they are, you know, the better risk they make—and the next year he has turned up to collect his annuity rejuvenated, rosy, spry as a boy. The secret? The secret is that financial worry, fear of the poorhouse, acres and bills off more people than all the deadly diseases combined. Release an old man by means of an annuity from all this worry, and he throws off his years and walks erect and happy and fearlessly young."

LEPROSY.

After One Ravages the Disease May Lie Dormant For Years.

The leper in the settlement at Molokai is far better off than the leper who lies in hiding outside. Such a leper is a lonely outcast, living in constant fear of discovery and slowly and surely rotting away. The action of leprosy is not steady. It may hold on its victim, commit a ravage and then lie dormant for an indefinite period. It may not commit another ravage for five years or ten years or forty years, and the patient may enjoy uninterrupted good health. Rarely, however, do these first ravages cease of themselves. The skilled surgeon is required, and the skilled surgeon cannot be called in for the leper who is in hiding. For instance, the first ravage may take the form of a perforating ulcer in the sole of the foot. When the bone is reached necrosis sets in. If the leper is in hiding he cannot be operated upon, the necrosis will continue to eat its way up the bone of the leg, and in a brief and horrible time that leper will die of gangrene or some other terrible complication. On the other hand, if that same leper is in Molokai the surgeon will operate upon the foot, remove the ulcer, cleanse the bone and put a complete stop to that particular ravage of the disease. A month after the operation the leper will be out riding on horseback, running foot races, swimming in the breakers or climbing the giddy sides of the valleys for mountain apples. And, as has been stated before, the disease, lying dormant, may not again attack him for five, ten or forty years.—Jack London in Contemporary Review.

LINCOLN'S HOUSE.

An Occasion When He Did Not Recognize It at First Sight.

"Mrs. Lincoln played a good joke on her husband when he was practicing law and journeyed about from court to court on horseback," says Major Eltinger. "Those trips often took several weeks at a time."

"On one of these trips Lincoln was gone for about four weeks. He returned late one night. Stopping his horse, he dismounted at the usual place. He turned to go into the house and then stopped. Although he was a man of temperance, he thought he must have been imbibing on the way some time that day, for before him stood a building he had never seen before. He thought it over for a minute and then went across the street and knocked at a friend's door. They were in bed, and some one sang out: "Who is it?"

"Abraham Lincoln," was the reply. "Yes, it is he."

"Tell me, where it is? Guess I must have been lost. I thought it was just across the way. When I went away the building was one story high, and now it is two."

He used to tell the joke on himself many times, according to the story.

OF THE DAY

Prominent Couple are Mar- ried at Home of Bride's Parents.

Matthews-James.

At 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon
at the home of the bride's parents,
Mr. and Mrs. W. S. James on Sixth street, occurred the marriage of their daughter Miss Alma Taylor James, to Alexander Matthews of Pittsburgh, formerly of Charleroi. The ceremony was performed by Rev. A.
M. Doak in the presence of immediate relatives of the two families. The bride was attended by Miss Leah Matthews, a sister of the groom, and Clarence James, a brother of the bride, was the groomsmen. The ring ceremony was used. The house was most beautifully decorated, the color scheme being pink and white. The bride was dressed in a white silk princess robe.
Mrs. James Schneibach of Charleroi played Mendelssohn's wedding march.

Following the performance of the ceremony a dinner was served. The couple left on the 8 o'clock train for Washington, D. C., New York and other Eastern points, where they will spend two weeks. Upon their return they will take up their residence at Pittsburgh, where they will be at home
to their friends at 638 Boggs Avenue,
after July 15.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Matthews are well known and popular here. The bride is a favorite among a large circle of friends and acquaintances.
She is a member of the M. E. choir and assistant organist. Mr. Matthews is employed in the offices of the Pittsburg Plate Glass company at Pittsburg, where he holds a responsible position.

Anthony-Henry.

A very pretty church wedding took place last evening at 9 o'clock in the Christ Lutheran church when Morris
Russell Anthony and Miss Elizabeth Henry were made husband and wife
by the pastor, Rev. C. E. Frantz.
Mrs. Herman A. Heupel played the Lohengrin's wedding march, the bride and groom, attended by Miss Ruth Richards and Harry B. Worthington, entered the church from the ladies'
reception room and stood before the altar. The Lutheran ring service was used. A large number of relatives and friends of the young couple were present to witness the ceremonies. Mr. and Mrs. Anthony are favorably known in Charleroi, and have the best wishes of the community. They are "at home" at 922 Mc-Kean Avenue.

The Children's Choir of St.
Jerome's church gave a very pleasant surprise last night to their organist, Bertha Kleist, at her home 736 Fallowfield Avenue. About twenty-five were in attendance. The evening was spent in playing games, music and singing. A delicious lunch was served, the table being beautifully decorated with the flowers the children brought with them.
